South Fulton Appoints Interim Finance Director

(CITY OF SOUTH FULTON, GA – May 24, 2021) – The City of South Fulton’s Finance Department has a new leader.

Rachel Bembry, CPA, a financial consultant who has been working with the city in recent months, started her new role as interim finance director today. She will lead the department, including the current budgeting process, as the city continues to search for a permanent director.

“Having worked closely with other cities in the region, Ms. Bembry brings a unique set of planning and accounting skills and a working knowledge of government operations,” City Manager Tammi Jones said. “She has been a tremendous help as we are putting together the budget for the next fiscal year. I look forward to her leadership as we continue to build upon our strong financial position.

Prior to this role, Bembry served as an interim finance director for the cities of Johns Creek and Doraville. She has extensive financial management experience in the government and private sectors, providing smoother audits, increased efficiency, and optimal financial performance.

Bembry is affiliated with the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, the Georgia Government Finance Officers Association, and the Government Finance Officers Association. She earned a dual bachelor’s degree in business administration with a focus in accounting and finance from Valdosta State University.
